The Vogue Edit: What We're Loving This Week

From the interiors inspiring us and the new restaurants and hotels we can't get enough of to the exhibitions to visit, Vogue editors pick their favourite things to do this week.

BUYING:

Isabelle Waring learned design from her couture seamstress grandmother, and founded her label, Isabelle Fox, in homage to her. Their shared love of Edie Sedgwick, Jean Shrimpton and Rita Hayworth manifests itself in playful dresses cut with expert precision. Perfect, if like me, you'd rather drift through wedding season in a simple dress with a story behind it, than sift through rails of identikit looks.

LISTENING:

Mike Skinner has missed tour buses since wrapping up The Streets in 2011. His solution? To reunite the band for a greatest hits tour, called The Darker The Shadow The Brighter The Light. His first stop in Glasgow saw him spray a sea of Scots with bottles of champagne and the London shows were fuelled with as much manic celebration from the prankster poet.

EATING:

Artusi, the pared-down Italian haven in the heart of Peckham, has opened a sister branch in Deptford, but the convenience of the original restaurant makes it hard to venture further into south-east London. It's chalkboard menu that changes daily actually makes it impossible to even walk past. Unfussy, seasonal pasta dishes – what more could you want from your local? Check out the feast options too, your friends will thank you later.
