Four dresses to see you through the summer season

Isabelle Fox London Sophia midi dress

Everything Isabelle Waring makes is created in England (Queen's Park, London in fact) and it was her grandmother's couture skills that inspired her to create her own range. Her elegant pieces hark back to classic icons such as Audrey Hepburn and Rita Hayworth, bringing to mind those vintage images that always seem to appear on fashion designers' moodboards.

Sophia cotton midi dress, £205, isabellefox.com

With its square neckline, thick straps and tight waist that flows out into a full skirt with pockets, her Sophia dress is like something from an old-school Cinecittà wardrobe of dreams. It comes in several fabrics, my favourite being the white or black Swiss cotton with its plumetis (small bobbles on the fabric).

Made in limited quantities from end-of-roll fabrics (cloth that might otherwise be thrown away), the collection provides a sustainable narrative as well. Watch this space for a new product launching soon, also made using leftover fabrics, that will complement the Sophia dress perfectly. Wear with your best jewellery and new heels.
